100% Freshwater Two-Owner Boat

Two Staterooms with accommodation for six adults

Loaded with recent upgrades

Completely rebuilt Mercruiser 7.4L engines top out at over 40 mph

Brand new canvas enclosure and Genco winter cover

Sleeps six adults in comfort

Produced from 1992 to 1999, the Sea Ray's 400 Express offered bold new styling and a spacious interior. The early versions were built on a deep-V hull and are solid fiberglass below the waterline, a feature that eliminates the problems some builders experienced with the fully cored hulls of later years. Below decks, is a nicely appointed main cabin with large galley, dinette/lounge and two private staterooms. Up top, the cockpit is very roomy with lots of seating for passengers, a double-wide helm seat and a convenient wet bar with ice maker.

This two-owner 400 Express comes with fully rebuilt Mercruiser engines with power-boosting custom carburetion providing additional horsepower for effortless planing and improved top-end performance. Total cost of this upgrade in 2018 was in excess of $25,000. A brand new canvas enclosure was added in 2020 ($13,000) with isInglass (a.k.a. Strataglass) panels forward for a crystal clear view from the helm. A new Genco fitted winter cover with zipper door is also included ($6,500). All interior and exterior carpet and upholstery have been upgraded ($6,000), along with the foredeck sun pad ($1,000).

We think you will be hard-pressed to find better value in a classic 400 Express. It's definitely a step or two above similar offerings on the market today, and well worth considering if a recently updated express-style cruiser with great resale potential is on your shopping list.
