Comments

Rinker's 192 Captiva is designed for comfort and exceptional handling with a deep vee hull that cuts through the chop for a softer ride. The 220 hp Merc engine doesn't put it in the performance boat category, but it still delivers close to 50 mph speed and much better fuel economy. It throws a decent wake and is a good choice for an entry level ski boat or a wake boat, in addition to being a very comfortable runabout for day trips. The original Alpha outdrive was replaced with a brand new (not rebuilt) unit in 2020. It comes with a colour-matched black canvas bimini top with enclosure and black bow and cockpit tonneau covers for mooring and trailering. All said and done, this is a very nicely kept, lightly used family bow rider, at a very affordable used-boat price.
